CYBERCRIME CASE STUDY

Topic: UPI Fraud

UPI fraud is one of the most common cybercrimes in India. It usually occurs when fraudsters trick users into approving fake payment requests. In a typical scenario, a victim receives a call or message claiming that they will receive money or a reward. The fraudster then sends a payment request link and asks the user to approve it.

The victim, unaware of the scam, enters their UPI PIN, thinking they are receiving money. Instead, the money gets deducted from their account. In some cases, fraudsters create fake apps or websites that look similar to genuine payment platforms.

Students and new users are often targeted because they may not fully understand how UPI systems work. The consequences include financial loss and stress.

This type of fraud highlights the importance of digital awareness and careful online behavior.
